

Table of contents

1	Introduction Rachel Hendery and Jennifer Hendriks	1
2	Substantival adjectives in the history of English and the nature of syntactic change Cynthia L. Allen	9
3	Prenominal possessor doubling constructions in (West) Germanic: reassessing the evidence for grammaticalisation Jennifer Hendriks	27
4	Alienability and stative HAVE in New Zealand English Heidi Quinn	49
5	Syntactic reconstruction by phonology: edge aligned reconstruction and its application to Tangkic truncation Erich R. Round	65
6	From verbs to particles: Pathways of semantic change for the Cantonese verbal particles gwo3 , hei2 and faan1 Winnie Chor	83
7	Grammaticalisation of discourse marking elements in relative clauses Rachel Hendery	105
8	Mood swings: Imperative verbs attract pronominal enclitics in Ngumpin-Yapa (Australian) and southern European languages Patrick McConvell	123
9	From ethical datives to number markers in Murriny Patha Joe Blythe	157
10	The diachronic evolution of the directional particle lái in Mandarin James McElvenny	185